Physician talks about Aids

BY ELLIS CUEVAS
Bay St. Louis physician Bert Chevis Thursday addressed the Hancock County Community Services Planning Council on the topic of Aids.

Dr. Chevis told the organization's members about Aids and how it has affected the nation and world.

He did say while every state is affected by Aids, Mississippi is not one of the highly infected states.

Emphasis was placed on telling children not to become involved in sexual relations and drugs, because they are two of the prime ways of contacting Aids, the local physician stated.

"Studies have indicated that mosquitos and insects do not cause Aids," Chevis said.

People can have the Aids virus and it can remain inactive for Home delivered Echo to carry new look

Beginning with Thursday's issue, The Sea Coast Echo home delivery copies will be wrapped in clear plastic bags to protect the newspaper from rain and early morning dampness.

Circulation manager Jeff Favre said the paper will be more easily recognizable in the new clear plastic bags. "Our customers at first may be looking for the old familiar blue bag, but once readers adjust to the new look we feel sure the paper will be easily identified as The Echo on front lawns and in delivery boxes," Favre noted.

Lakeshore area citizens plan meeting to discuss post office

BY DENA BISNETTE

A meeting of citizens who will be affected by a proposed relocation of the Lakeshore post office has been set for 7 p.m. Thursday at the Gulfview Elementary School gymnasium.

According to Lakeshore resident Marion F. Green, the affected area includes BaySide Park, Bayou Phillips, Ansley, Heron Bay Estates and Lakeshore.

Last year, postal service officials announced that they planned to close the existing Clermont Harbor post office and relocate the Lakeshore post office, which is located in a trailer on Lakeshore Road.

Green said several postal officials, including Norman Dille of the district office in Gulfport and Larry Herndon, a representative of the U.S. Postal Service's real estate acquisition office in Memphis, Tenn., visited Lakeshore last week and met with about 30 people regarding a proposed site at the intersection of Lower Bay and Clermont Harbor Roads near St. Ann's Church.

Green said he was contacted by postal officials several days ago and has been told that the advertising for bids on a site will be reopened.

Herndon explained that the closing date on the second advertisement will be May 12.

He said the second advertisement is an extension of the first one.

Green explained that people who attended last week's meeting had two major objections to the proposed site, one of which involves the dangerousness of the intersection of Lower Bay and Clermont Harbor roads.

Herndon said he heard pros and cons on the matter at the meeting and the overriding concern, in his opinion, was that the first advertisement was not properly publicized.

He said the previous offers will be retained to be considered with any new ones.

Other complaints, such as the one regarding the intersection, had no bearing on the decision to readvertise, Herndon said.

He said the postal service's only concern in the matter is that people in the area have the proper opportunities to offer their land as a site for the consolidated Lakeshore and Clermont Harbor post office building.

Green said the second objection citizens at the meeting last week voiced is that the site is in Clermont Harbor.

Green stated that postal officials had conducted a public hearing in Clermont Harbor after announcing the proposed closing of that community's post office.

He said no type of public hearing had been conducted in Lakeshore, nor was there ever any announcement that the Lakeshore post office might be closed rather than relocated.

Bay High's Deca officers, award winners seeking travel funds for national meet

Two juniors at Bay Senior High captured state titles recently at the annual Distribution Clubs of America Career Development Conference in Jackson.

Joy Ladner, daughter of Buck Ladner of Bay St. Louis, was elected Deca state vice president. The convention was attended by 900 of the 3,500 state members of the Deca organization.

Marti Reed, daughter of Jay Reed of Eupora and Katie Reed of Bay St. Louis were District IV vice president. She will represent the Deca members and chapters from south Mississippi.

This summer Ladner and Reed will attend a three-day workshop designed to prepare them to fulfill the responsibilities of their new positions. They will be given training in leadership development, public speaking and officer training.

During the next school year they will conduct workshops around the state and at the Southern and North Atlantic combined regional Deca conference in Nashville, Tenn. An estimated 6,000 students will be attending this conference.

Their first duty will be to attend the National Deca Conference in Salt Lake City, Utah. They will be attending this conference with three of their classmates as Bay High had three winners in Deca state activities events at this year's state conference. These students advance to national competition April 26-May 1 in Salt Lake City.

AWARD WINNERS

Nola Derrickson captured the first place award for her Creative Marketing Research Project.

Michael James Kennedy placed second in the area of

Coast Realtors to observe American Home Week

Apr. 24-30 has been designated across the country as "American Home Week."

It's theme this year, "Pride in Property...Our Nation's Heritage" is aimed at reminding individuals, businesses, and industries of their constitutional right to own property and the need to protect that right.

The West Gulf Coast Board of Realtors will be celebrating this 33rd annual event with a series of community service projects, open houses, and seminars.

Each year the board, to which most Hancock County Realtors belong, sponsors a restoration project for a needy organization.

This year's project will be the Gulf Coast Women's Center, an organization that aids and shelters battered women and children from Hancock, Harrison, and Jackson counties.

The board plans to complete a total renovation of the kitchen, baths, and playground at the home, which shelters at times many, many women and children who have fallen victim to abuse.

On Thursday the Board will sponsor a seminar for anyone thinking of buying or selling homes in the area.

The seminar will be held at Scafield's Wheel Inn Restaurant on Hwy. 90 in Bay St. Louis from 7-9 p.m.

It is free to the public and reservations are not required.

The speakers will include Nell Frisbie of Coldwell Banker, Herb Dubisson of ERA Bayshore Realty, Phillip Payment of Peoples Federal, Dianne Havard of Southern Federal Savings, Cathy Ladner of State Farm Insurance, Ames Kergosien of Kergosien Realty and Insurance, and Holly Hurston, a local appraiser.

Rachael Thiac of John Phillips & Associates is coordinating the event and will serve as master of ceremonies.

The audience will have the opportunity to question the speakers after their presentations. The board hopes to help educate the public so as to help them make informed choices and to see the mechanics behind home ownership.

The terms and entire experience can be frightening to the novice, but can be eased with information, Thiac noted.

During the week, several homes will be held open by local Realtors who hope the public will take the opportunity to see what is available in the area, she added.

With interest rates at low levels and an abundant supply of homes on the market, now is the time to buy, whether for the first time or to sell a smaller home and move up to a larger one, she stated.

Questions about any of the events of the week may be addressed to a local Realtor, or Thiac at the John Phillips office, 467-0600.

Pan Am World Services selected as finalist for NASA Excellence Award

Pan Am World Services Inc. has been selected as a finalist for the NASA Excellence Award for Quality and Productivity for 1987. Pan Am is NASA's facility operation services contractor at the National Space Technology Laboratories in Hancock County.

The selection of Pan Am and seven other firms was announced in Washington by George Rodney, NASA's associate administrator for safety, reliability, maintainability and quality assurance. The announcement came after a six month review process following release of award application guidelines.

NSTL Director Jerry Hlass said, "The government-industry team at NSTL has an outstanding record of achievements. Pan Am's selection as a finalist for the NASA excellence award is a credit to the company's contributions to our team effort."

The award is administered for NASA by the American Society for Quality Control, the Milwaukee-based professional association and a worldwide leader in development, promotion and application of quality and quality-related technologies. The award recognizes NASA prime contractors, subcontractors and suppliers for outstanding achievement in quality and productivity improvement.

The award process now advances to the third phase—validation team visits to finalists' facilities to validate commitment and accomplishments.

Following this review and recommendations of the award evaluation committee, NASA's Productivity Steering Committee, headed by NASA Administrator Dr. James Fletcher, will be briefed and make the final selection of award recipients. Fletcher will present the award in ceremonies at the recipients' location approximately six weeks after the announcement. Key goals of the award are to institutionalize quality and productivity practices throughout NASA and the agency's contractors and to transfer quality and productivity improvement methods of award recipients to others.

In addition to Pan Am, other finalists for the 1987 award are Bendix Field Engineering Corp., Columbia, Md.; Boeing Computer Support Services Inc., Huntsville, Ala.; General Electric Co., Spacecraft Operations-Valley Forge, Philadelphia, Penn.; Lockheed Engineering and Management Services Co., Houston; Lockheed Space Operations Co., Titusville, Fla.; Rockwell International, Rocketdyne Division, Canoga Park, Calif.; and Rockwell International, Space Transportation Division, Downey, Calif.

Recipients for 1986 were IBM Federal Systems Division, Houston, and Martin Marietta Manned Space Systems, New Orleans, both recognized as outstanding contractors in the aerospace industry.

Loyalty Day is a national celebration in the United States on May 1 of each year.

For the past several years, the Theodore S. Price Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 3253 has been in the habit of honoring police and firefighters as part of Loyalty Day in our area.

The local VFW will have their Loyalty Day Awards ceremony on Monday, April 28 at 7 p.m. at the post home on Third Street, Bay St. Louis.

The members of VFW posts throughout the United States worked very hard for many years to have Loyalty Day approved by Congress in 1958.

There are many ways VFW men and women sponsor Americanism activities each year, and we feel the local VFW should be commended in honoring our law enforcement officers and firefighters.

Law enforcement officers and firefighters seldom get praise, yet they do an outstanding job in our area.

The City of Waveland is continuing celebrating 100 hundred years of existence and the next event will be on Saturday, April 30 when tree planting will take place at designated areas.

Members of Bay-Waveland, Diamondhead and Blue Jeans Garden Clubs are sponsoring the planting of some 40 crepe myrtle trees.

As many of you know, crepe myrtle trees are very hardy in this area and bloom during the hottest part of the summer.

It is nice to see the many colors of crepe myrtles in bloom when few flowers are blooming.

AQUACULTURE

You don't have to be from Mississippi to know that the face of agriculture is changing. We're still picking cotton, but we're still harvesting rice and we're still growing row crops like soybean, but today we're doing a lot more.

Catfish farms are popping up all over the state. And thanks to the efforts of the Catfish Farmers Association, we now serve more markets than ever.

In my district, we have long relied on shrimp and fishing in the Mississippi Sound and the Gulf of Mexico. Today, however, we are looking for aquaculture alternatives and finding them.

Take the redfish for example. This species became so sought after that we had to put restrictions on catching it. Today, we are growing our own redfish in man-made ponds.

In Jackson County, we'll soon be growing striped bass in man-made tanks. Phase one of the project calls for 58 of these tanks with each tank producing 12,000 pounds per year.

And some of my neighbors in Escatawpa are growing and harvesting soft-shell crawfish. Once it's cooked you eat the entire thing—from head to tail. It may not sound appetizing, but believe it or not, it is.

And through the efforts of NOAA, the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration, we've discovered a vast supply of butterflyfish in the Gulf of Mexico. Here's how it works. Mississippi fishermen call NOAA and it tells the fishermen where to drop their nets.

Not long ago, one of our boats went out and came back with 70 thousand pounds. The Japanese are now paying $1.35 a pound for this fish. That's big money. There is still work to do, however. Shrimp and fishing vessels will need to be converted for deep-water harvesting, but we're working on ways to make that easier.

These are all examples of private business teaming up with government and educational research to find answers. It's a cooperative effort that's paying dividends for all of Mississippi. So aquaculture is alive and well in our state. Yes, it's changing, but in our case, it's changing for the better.

"It's hard to believe that the human body is the most perfect machine ever made, isn't it?"

News from the Capitol City

Gov. Ray Mabus' teacher pay raise plan passed a crucial hurdle last week at the Capitol. However, Mabus' teacher funding proposal and plans to reorganize state government met some opposition before House passage.

Meanwhile in the Senate last week, senators agreed to reverse Mississippi's long-time ban on liquor advertising after first voting in favor of keeping the restriction in place.

Last week marked the deadline for consideration of general bills and constitutional amendments in both chambers. For example, a House bill had to have passed both the House and the Senate by Thursday, while Senate bills also had to make it out of both chambers by the same deadline.

Other legislation approved last week included:

• Senate agreement with a House plan to regulate companies selling home warranties through the state insurance department.

• House approval of allowing first-offender drunk drivers to be provided temporary driving permits to allow job-related driving.

• Senate passage of House-passed measures to reform the state's civil liability laws, including allowing doctors and lawyers to serve on juries and requiring courts to assess costs against attorneys and parties who bring frivolous lawsuits.

The House vote to free $25 million in highway funds for teacher pay marked a crucial victory for Mabus. Mabus has insisted that the state could afford to give teachers an average $3,700 pay hike—a $114 million plan—by rearranging the budget as well as earmarking one-time revenue sources and new growth revenues to higher teacher salaries.

The Senate already approved transferring $27 million in highway bond refinancing money to pay for the raises. The House $25 million plan also allocates $2 million for an economic development highway fund.

The House approved transferring the highway bond retirement money to help fund teacher pay on a 78-43 vote. However, opponents wanted to protect the highway money. Critics also say Mabus' plan that includes $50 million in one-time revenue will force legislators to approve a tax increase next year to keep the state in the black.

Other items on Mabus' legislative agenda that took the spotlight last week were his government reorganization study and an endorsed reorganization of the state Department of Economic Development and the state Research and Development Center.

He House voted 78-40 in favor of the Mabus-backed plan to transfer economic development services in the Research and Development Center to the Department of Economic Development. Its supporter said the plan was not designed to save money but eliminate duplication of services and intra-agency competition as well as put the responsibility for the state's economic development operation under the governor. The department would operate under a director named by the governor instead of under a board.

Mabus' proposed government reorganization study brought friction in the House when some representatives discovered that the study was to be funded through an additional $350,000 appropriation instead through Mabus' finding the funds in existing budgets. The appropriation squeaked through 57-56.

In the Senate, senators agreed to lift a long-time ban on liquor advertising in state news media. After first rejecting changing the law 26-25 on Wednesday, senators agreed to lift the ban in a 27-23 reversal. The House passed the bill earlier in the session. Under the Senate version of the bill, only media outlets in wet counties could accept liquor ads.

Supporters of lifting the ban argue that the law has penalized Mississippi business people while liquor ads come into the state on cable television and national publications despite the law. Opponents believe the ads influence consumers to drink.

HB1034. The Senate reversed itself and approved the liquor advertising bill on April 14 on a 27-23 vote. Taylor, yes; Tate, no.

HB 555. The Senate voted 43-9 to put companies selling home warranties under the regulation of the state Insurance Department. Taylor, yes; Tate, yes.

Senator Thad Cochran

Senator Thad Cochran says the cost and availability of day care is an issue of "growing concern to the working parents of this nation."

The senator, a member of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, noted it is a situation which affects thousands of Mississippi families and children.

He said that figures indicate that nearly two-thirds, 63 percent, of mothers with children ages six to 17 work outside the home in Mississippi, and that over half, 54 percent, of those with children under six are employed outside the home.

"This is a particularly critical problem for families with children of pre-school age," he commented.

In Mississippi, this involves over 92,500 working mothers and nearly 139,000 children.

Cochran said he is a co-sponsor with Senator Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) of S. 1878, the Child Care Services Improvement Act, which is under study in the Labor and Human Resources Committee. Hearings are underway in the panel on that and other bills addressing the child care situation.

He pointed out that S. 1878 includes incentives for employers to provide on-site day care facilities, and it addresses the issue of after-school child care for so-called "latch key" children.

The bill would provide seed money for non-profit organizations who provide day care facilities, including those by churches and religious organizations, and calls for state licensing of such facilities for them to be eligible for federal participation.

"There is a great deal of concern and interest in Congress on this issue," Senator Cochran commented. "I am interested in hearing any suggestions or opinions from parents, working mothers and taxpayers about day care legislation."

The President's Column

By RONALD REAGAN

You have, probably heard that some of our political opponents are very concerned about the state of our economy. And I have to tell you, I do not blame them. If I were in their shoes, I would be worried too.

You see, April marks the 65th straight month of the longest peacetime expansion in U.S. history. In that time, we have created nearly 16 million jobs. They are better and higher-paying, too, which is one reason why the real income of the average American has been rising steadily for the last five years.

The percentage of Americans employed is the highest in history, and the unemployment rate continues to drop, down to its lowest level since 1974.

Since 1980, U.S. manufacturing has increased its productivity almost three times as fast as in the seven previous years. Inflation remains low, while the G.N.P. growth this year and last has exceeded even our own optimistic expectations.

Somehow, our opponents have convinced themselves that this record growth, vibrant job creation, and more productive economy is bad news; and they say it is all the fault of Reaganomics.

Well, I would love to take the blame, or credit, as the case may be, but that just wouldn't be fair. All we did was get government out of the way—we cut taxes, inflation, and regulations—and we let the American people take back their own economy and run with it.

In their effort to prove that this economic boom we are in is really a bust, our opponents have had to weave some pretty tall tales. One of those they tell about America is that we are threatened by foreign investment.

Well, to paraphrase what Joe Friday used to say in Dragnet, "let's just look at the facts, Ma'am." Yes, foreigners now hold about 12 percent of U.S. public debt—but that is down from 16 percent in 1978. Foreign resources also accounted for 10 percent of total credit market funds last year—exactly the same as in the mid-1970s.

But even so, foreign investment is not something to be scared of. It brings us a host of benefits, including jobs and lower interest rates for all Americans, whether they be home buyers, small businessmen, consumers, or farmers.

Writer-economist Warren Brookes makes a very good point: "What difference does it make," he asks, "whether a Japanese company owns a factory in Detroit or in Marysville, Ohio? Does someone seriously think they might dismantle it brick by brick and ship it back to Japan in the middle of the night?"

I wonder if the workers in those plants think foreign investment is such a bad thing, or the nearly three million other Americans employed by foreign firms in the U.S., whose payrolls add up to more than $70 billion and that pay about $8 billion in income taxes to the U.S. Treasury.

The fact is, we live in a global economy. We can be glad people in other countries choose to invest in the vibrant and growing U.S. economy rather than their own nations. I do not blame them. I think America is a pretty good investment, too.

Right now, however, there is a trade bill working its way through Congress that could go a long way toward making America a bad investment, for Americans and foreigners alike. At this moment, we have not seen the final bill, but, from what we already know, we still have very serious reservations.

We will continue to work with the full conference and the congressional leadership to clear up these problems. But the bottom line is this: I will veto a bad trade bill before I will let a bad trade bill veto our economic expansion.

Another important matter facing the Nation today is the I.N.F. treaty, which I signed with General Secretary Gorbachev at our Washington Summit meeting last December. This treaty will, for the first time, eliminate an entire class of U.S. and Soviet missiles. We called this the "zero option" when I first proposed it in 1981.

The Treaty also requires the Soviet Union to make far greater reductions now in its missile systems to reach equality with us. This is an historic precedent, and we will apply it to other arms negotiations as well. Finally, the Treaty has the most comprehensive verification regime in arms control history. This, too, is an important precedent for other negotiations, particularly those on strategic arms—where an even more elaborate verification regime will be required.

In sum, this treaty represents what can be accomplished when we negotiate from a position of strength. Action on it is now up to the United States Senate, which must give its advice and consent to ratification. I hope it will be given expeditious consideration by the full Senate, and I urge all Senators to provide their advice and consent without reservation. It is a solid treaty, and it enhances the security of our country and our Allies.

JACKSON, Miss.—The decision on implementing a countywide system of road management would be left to voters in each county under a hotly debated bill passed by the Mississippi House of Representatives.

The bill originally would have required a county-unit system in each county by October 1989. The local-option referendum was inserted by the House by a vote of 68-54 following a lengthy floor fight. A number of other amendments also were adopted before the bill was finally passed, 110-12, last week.

Passage of the county-unit bill was among the highlights of a busy week that also saw dozens of other measures gaining approval as lawmakers prepared for another crucial deadline. The cutoff is Thursday, Apr. 14, for original floor action on general bills previously passed by the opposite chamber.

The county-unit bill was a revised version of a Senate measure and was expected to be sent to a conference committee to settle House-Senate differences. Under the bill, all counties would be mandated to adopt a central purchasing and inventory control system, leaving it to voters to decide this fall if they want a countywide system of road management.

Several counties already operate under some form of centralized or unit system, but the majority use the traditional beat system where each supervisor is responsible for road work in his own district. Proponents maintain a county-unit system is more efficient. Other legislators contend what works for one county may not necessarily work for another, saying the final decision should be left to voters at the local level.

A proposal to increase maximum weekly benefits under the state's unemployment compensation law from $130 to $145 won final legislative approval last week with adoption of a compromise bill recommended by a House-Senate conference committee.

The measure, which also provides a small decrease in employees' contributions to the unemployment compensation trust fund, had gone to conference after different versions were passed by the House and Senate. The earlier House bill would have upped the weekly maximum to $150, while the Senate set the figure at $140.

Other measures passed by the House in the past week included:

► A bill to speed up the collection of insurance premium taxes, producing an estimated one-time windfall of nearly $19 million for the coming year; the measure was part of the Governor's package to help fund a teachers' pay raise and other programs.

► A bill to regulate sports agents who deal with student athletes with stiff penalties for anyone who violates restrictions spelled out in the legislation.

► Separate proposals to authorize 20 percent salary increases for sheriffs and county supervisors; another bill would provide a similar increase for the Lieutenant Governor and Speaker of the House.

In addition, the House approved bills to authorize appointment of a special 25-member task force to study housing conditions in the May 17 Special Election. The election has been called to fill the aldermen posts in Wards Three and Four vacated by the resignations of Louie Smolensky and Herman Yarborough, respectively.

The candidate, Curtis P. Colson Jr., is a resident of 123 Oak Blvd. and owner of CPC Design-Build specializing in quality controlled, custom built homes.

Colson is a member of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, member of Waveland American Legion Post No. 77 and secretary of the Bay Area Youth Soccer Association.

He is a U.S. Navy veteran of the Vietnam War.

Colson attended Bay High School, Pearl River Junior College and holds a bachelor's degree in architecture from Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge.

He is a member of St. Clare Parish in Waveland, son of Joanne Colson of Waveland who owns Mijo's Florist Shop, and Curtis Colson of BaySide Park.

"I believe Waveland is a wonderful community and I am proud to be a member of it," the candidate stated.

"I am a family man and have been married for 17 years to my wife, the former Roxanne Adams. We have three children—Curt, 13; Chad, 11, and Wenddy, 7," Colson continued.

"I am a local businessman and I would like to see the City of Waveland continue to prosper. As alderman I will function to the best of my ability to serve the people and to do what is right for our community—I will serve with honesty and integrity," Colson stated.

many years. Dr. Chevis indicated a person could find out if they have the Aids virus by donating blood, at the Health Department or from a physician.

The cost is "free" for blood donors and if upon testing blood donor is suspected of having Aids, they would be privately informed by a physician.

"Telling a person they have the virus is very hard for physicians," the doctor stated.

As far as the public is concerned, Dr. Chevis said, 'Aids' is one of the biggest problems.

"All blood is now checked for the virus and the chances of a person getting Aids from a transfusion is one in 40,000. This compares with one in 10,000 Americans will die in an auto accident," Dr. Chevis said.

Prevention is important in preventing Aids and persons possibly suspecting they may have been exposed to the virus should be checked, Chevis said.

state; provide for libraries to participate in a statewide library development program; allow a lifetime hunting and fishing license for Mississippi residents; increase boat registration fees; update maximum fines for violating boating laws; permit the Public Employees Retirement System to develop a group life and health insurance plan for retired public employees; and designate the Public Service Commission to take over the safety inspection of trucks hauling hazardous material.

Other bills passed by the House would allow the Public Safety Department to issue special identification cards for people without driver licenses, continue a voluntary mediation program to help farmers, provide for a statewide program to combat litter, and authorize a law enforcement officer to make an arrest without a warrant in a domestic violence case. A number of bills had been passed earlier in both chambers, and the House voted to simply make the Senate version conform to its own measure.

Numerous measures failed to survive last week's deadline for committee action on general bills, including the House-passed landlord-tenant rights bill and a measure to help minority-owned businesses get a share of state contracts. Both died in Senate committees.

The House rejected a bill to boost the interest rate on damage-suit awards from 8 to 10 percent and require interest to be paid from the time the complaint was filed, rather than when the judgment is rendered.

ARCHITECT MICHAEL REEVES, left, talks with several department heads about a proposed new county building and what each of them would need in such a facility. Reeves was named by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors Thursday to prepare the preliminary building designs needed to apply for Community Development Block Grant funds to finance the building project. Bay architect, county assessing building needs

BY DENA BISNETTE
A Bay St. Louis architect is presently surveying several county agencies to find out what they would need in a new building. At a Hancock Board of Supervisors workshop Thursday attended by about 30 representatives of various county departments and agencies, Board President Ronald Cuevas said Michael Reeves of Architectural Production Services had been selected to do the preliminary design work needed for a Community Development Block Grant Application for a multi-purpose building for the county.

The grant application will be prepared by Engineering Associates of Jackson, represented Thursday by Wayne Peterson. Cuevas had stated earlier that the proposed building, for which the county already has a location on fairgrounds property, is expected to cost about $700,000 to $800,000 and to measure at least 20,000 square feet.

The board president said he had been advised by administrators of the grant program, which is handled through the Governor's Office of State and Federal Programs, to provide as much information as possible about how many people the building would serve and the general income of those people. Several of the departments expected to be housed in the building serve large numbers of low-income or fixed-income people, including the county's welfare department, child development center, senior citizens programs and health department.

The other agencies are also primarily service agencies, including the Hancock County Extension Service. Only one agency originally included on the list for the proposed building, the local branch of Gulf Coast Mental Health Center, which also operates Hancock Industries, was dropped from the list.

While there had been no plans to move Hancock Industries, which provides jobs for handicapped persons and has an industrial character more appropriate to the program's present quarters at Fort Bienvenue Industrial Park, moving the mental health clinic had been considered.

However, a Gulf Coast Mental Health representative explained to Cuevas that an isolated location is better for the clinic because "it is hard enough to get most of the people to come there anyway." The clinic is presently located in a suite of offices in Shieldsboro Square.

All of the other agencies favored the idea of moving, although a few expressed a need for facilities designed to meet specific state requirements.

The child development center, for example, will need to have a fenced playground providing 70 square feet of play area per child, or about 2,300 square feet.

Certain health department matters are considered confidential and a separate entrance to that department would be required to maintain that confidentiality.

The Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service needs a demonstration kitchen, and the senior citizens need a place to prepare and serve meals.

Cuevas said the board plans further renovations on the fairgrounds building, and once the kitchen has been improved that facility might be made available to some of the agencies housed in the new building.

In addition, some of the agencies might need small conference rooms, but the board feels that the building should also include a large conference room with seating for 50 to 60 people that can be used for various sorts of community programs in addition to meetings.

The board president added that he wants the building to be a one-story structure, particularly with regard to keeping it as accessible as possible for the handicapped.

Reeves handed those attending the meeting a written questionnaire to help assess needs of each department, but said he would meet with those with special needs.

The board's next regular meeting is April 29.

Republicans slate precinct, county caucuses Apr. 30

Hancock County Republicans will kick off the 1988 Convention process on Saturday, Apr. 30, when they hold precinct and county caucuses.

Mike Smith, chairman of the Hancock County party, urged Republicans to meet at their precinct polling places at 10 a.m. to elect delegates to attend the county convention. The county convention will be held at 3 p.m. on the same day at the Hancock County Courthouse.

Delegates to the State Convention scheduled for Saturday, May 21 will be elected at that time, said Smith.

Hancock County will send three voting delegates and three alternates to the State Convention along with numerous other supporters.

The State Convention will be held in Jackson at the Ramada Inn Coliseum. "This is an excellent opportunity for Republicans in Hancock County to have grassroots participation in the convention process," said Smith.

The National Republican Convention will be held in the New Orleans Superdome, Aug. 15-18.

Further, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to wash, drag, or pull double or multiple trawls on top of the water or under the water with the bags tied or untied in any area of the territorial waters of the State of Mississippi which are closed to the use of double trawls.

SECTION 5. In determining the legal size of shrimp, three (3) pounds of shrimp with the heads on shall be taken at random from the deck of each boat or vessel. Said three (3) pounds of shrimp shall be counted and the number of shrimp shall be divided by three (3). In the event the result totals more than sixty-eight (68), the shrimp catch shall be forfeited to the State of Mississippi and the operator of said boat or vessel shall be in violation of Section 49-15-15-3(a) of the Mississippi Code of 1972, Annotated.

SECTION 6. Any person, firm, or corporation violating any of the provisions of this Ordinance shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars ($100) or imprisoned not more than one (1) year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

SECTION 7. Each section and subsection of this Ordinance shall be declared separate, and if any section or subsection of this Ordinance shall be held invalid or unconstitutional, the balance of said Ordinance shall remain in full force and effect.

Alabama Gulf Waters close to netting on weekends

Effective Friday Apr. 22 the waters of the Gulf of Mexico within the jurisdiction of the State of Alabama, as well as the Pelican Bay, are closed to all gill, trammel and other entangling nets from sunset Friday through sunset Sunday of each week.

The weekend ban will last until Aug. 28. The regulation was promulgated by Commissioner James D. Martin in order to reduce commercial fishing pressure on Spanish mackerel stocks off Alabama.

A recreational limit of 10 Spanish mackerel per person per day became effective on Mar. 29

"Mississippi Roads" features modern dance, music, yard art

Modern dance, country music and artfully decorated yards are highlighted in the next edition of "Mississippi Roads" Tuesday, Apr. 26, at 7:30 p.m. on Mississippi ETV.

At its first stop, "Roads" visits Jackson's Modern Dance Collective, Debra Billips, a member of the Board of Directors of the dance troupe, explains the history of the group. Choreographer/Artistic Director Cherie Cooper discusses the company's artistic concept and the design of the dance and choreography. Ensemble dancers Amy Schwalm, Kelly Oakes and Bret Hamilton are shown in rehearsal and in an excerpt from a recent work.

Next, "Mississippi Roads" travels north to Amory and the Vinegar Bend Station, a local social club where citizens gather on Thursday evenings to share music and exhibit their arts and crafts. Perry Newton tells how the Vinegar Bend Station got its name and describes the arts and crafts, including the quilts and wood carvings on the walls.

Viewers are treated to the talents of Lois Harlow, who sings "Feel Right," and Brandi Tartt, who performs "Tell Me Baby Why You've Been Gone So Long."

Finally, Harry Reeves, president of the Country Talent Club, describes the atmosphere at the club and the attitudes of those who attend.

The final segment of this week's "Mississippi Roads" looks at yard art—everything from pink flamingos to primitive art.

"Mississippi Roads" is underwritten by Chevron U.S.A. Inc.

National AIDS Memorial Quilt showing scheduled in New Orleans May 12-14

Tickets are now on sale for the Thursday, May 12 fundraising event opening the New Orleans Rivergate exhibition of the National AIDS Memorial Quilt, known as the Names Project.

The Quilt may be viewed free of charge Friday, May 13 from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Saturday, May 14 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The 20-city tour of the Quilt opened Apr. 7 in Los Angeles.

New Orleans is the ninth stop on the national tour, between Houston (May 7-8) and Atlanta (May 28-30).

The Quilt is composed of nearly 4,000 individual panels made in honor of people who have died of AIDS, and local organizers believe the Rivergate exhibition area will allow the city to display the largest number of panels of any city on the tour.

Rivergate doors open at 6 p.m. for the May 12 fundraiser, with a reception from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

The unfolding ceremony, in which the Quilt is laid out one section at a time as local community leaders, elected officials, educators and others read the names from the Quilt panels, begins at 8 p.m.

The event is sponsored in New Orleans by United Services for AIDS and its affiliated organizations: NO AIDS Task Force, Project Lazarus, Community Relief for PWAS. New Orleans AIDS Project.

After the unfolding, the Quilt can be viewed more closely by means of canvas walkways which are integrated into it at 24-foot intervals.

Celebrities represented in the quilt include Liberace, Rock Hudson, Michel Foucault, Charles Ludlum and Willi Smith.

Also included are three panels in memory of parents and children, and three pairs of brothers.

Panels created by and for the people from Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama will be displayed together in an area adjoining the main Quilt.

Tickets to the May 12 event will be available at the door and are on sale for $25 at the following New Orleans locations: AIDS Information Center, 906 Bourbon Street, 522-2437; N.O. AIDS Task Force, 210 State Street, 891-3732; Faubourg Marigny Bookstore, 600 Frenchmen, 943-9875; Ashley's Hallmark, Uptown Square, 866-5046; and La Peniche Restaurant, 1940 Dauphine, 943-1460.

Funds generated by the New Orleans exhibit of the Quilt will support direct services for people with AIDS and will be administered by United Services for AIDS, the fundraising organization for AIDS agencies in the New Orleans area.

For additional ticket information, call (504) 891-2929.

RESCUED KITTEN—Seven-year-old Shawn Hoda uses a bottle to feed a kitten that he adopted after the animal was rescued from behind a washing machine in a Bay St. Louis laundromat. The kitten, which was about a week old when rescued on April 1, had apparently been thrown behind the machine and abandoned, Hoda's sister Brenda Hoda said. Bay St. Louis Dog Warden Larry Dahl, contacted after Hoda called the police department, used a broomstick to remove the cat from behind the machine. A Hancock County Humane Society representative then provided the Hodas with information on caring for the young animal. Shawn Hoda said he named the kitten Bare because it "barely made it." Brenda Hoda asked that people with unwanted kittens and puppies contact the Hancock County Humane Society before abandoning the animals to starve or die. The animal shelter may be reached at 467-0230. (Echo staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

Five homes located in the Pass Christian Scenic Drive Historic District will be featured Sunday, May 1, when the Pass Christian Historical Society sponsors its 1988 Tour of Homes.

The district is included on the National Register of Historic Places and has been recommended to the U.S. Department of Interior for designation as a national landmark. It includes a large portion of the Pass Christian Beachfront as well as homes on Seal Avenue and Second Street.

The homes selected for this year's tour include those of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ewing Brown, Mrs. Bethany Villere, Mr. and Mrs. Reilly L. Stonecipher, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald A. Yeager and Mr. and Mrs. William C. Kidd.

The Brown home, 1024 West Beach, was constructed about 1890 by the Stith family, using the design and name of "Whitehall," the family's former home in Alabama. Miss Rose Stith was librarian of the town library in the early 1900s.

Mrs. Grace Jones converted the home into a duplex during World War II and moved part of the west cottage, built around 1837, to form the present east cottage.

Purchased in 1949 by Mr. and Mrs. Stanford Morse Sr., the main house once more became a single residence after extensive remodeling by the New Orleans firm of Koch and Wilson. The graceful stairway and garden room were added at that time.

The Villere home is located at 710 West Beach. Corinthian columns, a turned balustrade and a bracketed cornice are a few of the details of this distinguished raised home built by the Marks family in 1871.

In the early 1930s the McClellan family replaced the columns under the gallery with brick arches. The facade is set with German siding and there is coping on the ridge of the roof, making the home one of the more architecturally distinguished structures in the district.

The Stonecipher home, 503 East Scenic Drive, will be open only from 3 p.m. until 5 p.m. when tea will be served.

Recently restored, the main block of this victorian home was originally one room deep with a projecting central bay. There were several additions in 1915.

Of special interest are the beveled glass doors enriched with egg and dart molding and a stained glass window west of the entrance.

The Yeager home at 543 East Scenic Drive is a boxy, story-and-a-half frame home with both bungalow and Colonial Revival detailing. The two-bay shed-roofed dormer is inset into the gable roof.

A long-time owner was Sydney N. Haas, owner of Haas Seafood Packing Plant, which was located where the Pass Christian Yacht Club now stands.

The Kidd home is located at 733 East Scenic Drive. The home is also known as the Hackett-Hayden cottage and was built around the turn of the century, then enlarged in the 1920s.

It is a modest, one-story frame five-bay home with a steeply pitched gable roof. The inset gallery has six square columns.

The structure was extensively remodeled in 1986 by the present owners. A late 19th century cast iron fence extends along the west side of the property.

All homes except the Stonecipher home will be open from 1:30 p.m. until 5 p.m. The tour will also feature a boutique with products from local artisans and merchants on the grounds of the Villere home.

Tickets are $6 and may be purchased at Pass Christian Chamber of Commerce and Book Boat. Tickets will also be sold the day of the tour at the gazebo in War Memorial Park, beginning at 1 p.m.

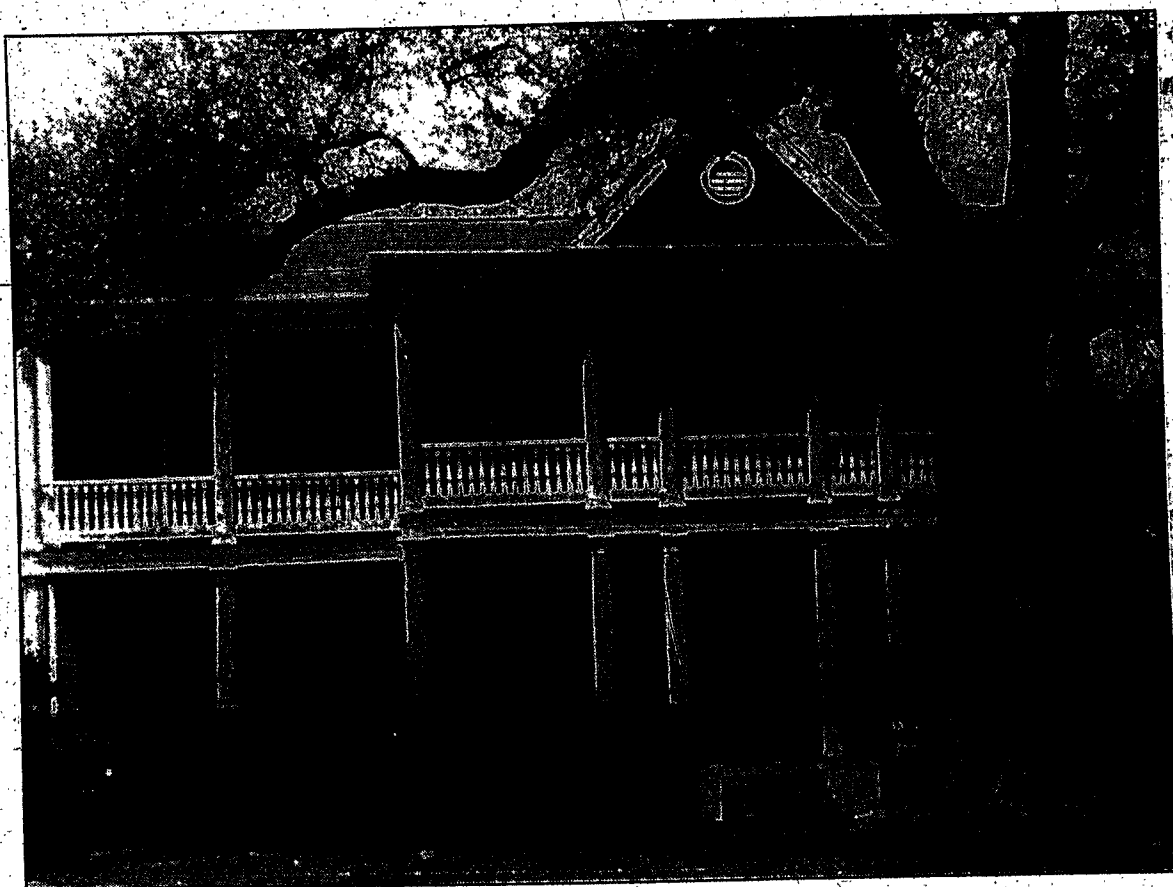

There will also be a drawing for door prizes donated by several Pass Christian merchants, including Book Boat, Bon Melange, Cotton Exchange and Hillver House.

In addition, several merchants will be open the day of the tour, including Annie's Restaurant, Helen's, Pirates Cove, Rosario's, Rusty Pelican, Looking for inexpensive ways to cut utility bills? You may want to consider making sun screens for your windows.

A workshop sponsored by the Hancock County Extension Service will be held Friday, May 6, 9:30 a.m. at the County Fairgrounds on Longfellow Road.

Participants must measure their windows and pre-register by Apr. 28. This allows time to order the materials in quantity.

The sunscreens, also called solar screens, are an inexpensive way to block the summer heat and have a fairly quick payback, according to Dr. Ron Walker, an energy education specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"The sun screens cut the sun's rays by 70 percent and pay back about $1 per installed square foot in a cooling season," Walker said.

In an average 3 feet by 5 feet window with 15 square feet of screen, a homeowner would save $15 that summer. Houses very often have more than one window on the west side, which gets the day's hottest sun. One hundred square feet of sun screen could save up to $100 in one season. Walker said the sun screens will last up to 10 years so the potential for savings is great.

"For best results we advise homeowners to use sun screens on the west side of a house that has no overhang or shade and gets several hours of direct sun every day," Walker said.

The payback for sun screens is quick if homeowners learn to make them themselves. The average 15-square-foot sun screen costs about $10 to make at the Extension Service workshops held at various times across the state. The cost includes the aluminum frames, the screen and the spline that holds the screen to the frame. The Extension Service provides the necessary tools.

Paying a contractor would increase the cost and the payback would take longer.

Currently few contractors in the state make sun screens to sell so people who want them have to learn to make them, Walker said. David Clune, a carpenter in Port Gibson, attended a workshop to learn how to make the sun screens and decide if he wants to add it to his business.

For the screens to fit correctly homeowners must measure their windows properly before beginning. After making the frame to match the dimensions, the black fiberglass screen is placed over the lightweight aluminum frames.

Then spline is pushed into the groove of the screen with a spline roller. The excess screen is cut away for a neat finish. It takes about 30 minutes to make one sun screen.

Ann Segrest of Hermanville made two sun screens in a similar workshop conducted by the Extension Service in 1985. She had two west windows with no shade.

"I can really tell a big difference," she said. "Before the sun screens my Venetian blinds were hot to the touch and now they aren't." She estimates her utility bill went down as much as $10 per month. Her sun screens paid for themselves in two months.

To preregister or for more information contact Darlene Underwood, Extension Home Economist, at 467-5456. Deadline to register is Thursday, Apr. 28.
